Supporting Non-Binary Students: Strategies For Understanding, Resource Development & Inclusion

Friday, April 23 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

Recent data suggests that nearly one-third of younger Americans (i.e., those from the Millennial and Generation Z cohorts) personally know someone who uses gender-neutral pronouns. Additionally, data also suggests that 60% of people from Generation Z think that forms and online profiles should offer options beyond merely “man” and “woman.” And finally, data suggests that younger people identify within the broader LGBTQ+ community at much higher rates than previous generations.

With these data points in mind, educational professionals and professionals in other industries are currently trying to be more inclusive to LGBTQ+ people. While there has been more discussion about supporting the broader LGBTQ+ community, inclusion initiatives often fail to address non-binary inclusion specifically. In the coming years, more students from Generation Z will enter the college classroom, and similar to the arrival of their Millennial counterparts, changes to instructional practices and support initiatives will need to follow.

Objectives:

- Understand basic demographic shifts related to gender diversity in younger cohorts
- Conceptualize what the identity, “non-binary,” means
- Recognize specific challenges facing non-binary students
- Identify practical ways to better support non-binary students in educational settings

Who Should Attend?

- Middle & High School Educators
- Principals
- School District Administrators
- Title IX Coordinators
- 2 and 4-year institutions
- Faculty (full & part-time)
- Department Chairs
- Provosts
- Instructional Designers
- Tutoring Staff
